

SPANISH MARITIME LAW ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT LECTURES AT IMLI

IMLI had the honour to host two lectures by Professor Ignacio Arroyo on Thursday 7th October and Friday 8th October 2010. Professor Arroyo conducted dynamic and encouraging discussions with the students of IMLI Class 2010/2011 on the “Unification of Maritime Law through International Conventions”. Indeed, at the end of his lectures students expressed their enthusiasm about his Socratic method of teaching and the relevance of international conventions and their proper implementation in the unification of maritime law.

In his lectures Professor Arroyo explained that international conventions are an important instrument for the unification of maritime law and maritime law has to be unified to help to the development of international trade. However, he continued, the adoption of an international instrument is a very complex and long procedure. The international instrument has to be, firstly approved by States in an international conference and secondly, to enter into force and to be binding at an international level has to meet the requirements stipulated in the same. Further, one has always to consider that this is not a complete method, since the proper implementation of these international instruments depends, among other things, on their incorporation to domestic law and their interpretation by the judiciary, who at the end is national and not supranational.

Professor Arroyo also reviewed from a critical point of view the Hague-Visby Rules, the Hamburg Rules, the Rotterdam Rules, and the Arrest of Ships Conventions 1952 and 1999.

He is an Attorney at law, an International Arbitrator and Professor of Commercial and Maritime Law at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. Since 2005 he is the President of the Spanish Maritime Law Association.
