

THE DIRECTOR ADDRESSES THE STUDENTS BEFORE THE END OF THE 32ND ACADEMIC YEAR

On Thursday 24 June, Professor David Attard (Director, IMLI) addressed the 32nd generation of students of the academic year 2020-2021.

Professor David Attard (Director, IMLI) addressing the Students

In his address, the Director expressed his pleasure in addressing the students on a day that marks the near conclusion of an illuminating chapter in their professional development. He commended them for having made it through a trying academic year further burdened by the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic. Professor Attard commended the students for the support they have lent each other throughout their journey and encouraged them to keep the spirit of camaraderie going even after IMLI. He also wished them all the best for the examination and encouraged them to finalise their dissertations meticulously. Professor Attard informed them that he is looking forward to their graduation on the 3rd of September. In concluding his address to the students, he entreated them to enjoy the excursions, which, bearing in mind all health and safety measures, the Institute has prepared for them to be able explore, as best as possible, the Maltese Islands.

The Director also thanked all the Institute's staff for their commitment and hard work during the academic year. He particularly registered his appreciation to the Academic staff for their commitment to ensuring that the students successfully complete their dissertations and academic projects during the summer break.
