IMLI COURSE ON THE LAW OF PORTS

Ports have been crucial centres of international trade since time immemorial. With the progressive transformation of international shipping, they are greatly contributing to the efficiency of the shipping industry.

As the gateways to international trade, ports provide a supportive structure for economic activities and development. Consequently, they are subject to extensive global regulations, which reflect numerous IMO treaty instruments.

Cognizant of its crucial role in enhancing capacity in the full spectrum of international maritime law, the Institute will offer the IMLI Course on the Law of Ports for the fifth consecutive time as of 9 February 2024.

This unique Course, which highlights the significance of the IMO's role in the efficient management of ports and the importance of effective implementation of international treaty obligations by States, will be delivered in two parts. The first part will provide a comprehensive Introduction to the Law of Ports and the second part will consist of Specialist Seminars on the Law of Ports. Both parts will be delivered by eminent experts in the field.

The Course will be delivered in a hybrid mode. Candidates who attend 80 per cent of the lectures, will be eligible for a certificate of attendance.

To apply, please contact by not later than 2 February 2024 Ms. Anusha Fernando at admissions@imli.org.
