LAST REMAINING DAYS TO APPLY FOR THE ACADEMIC YEAR 2026-2027!

The IMO International Maritime Law Institute (IMLI) is proud of the great interest generated for admission to its master programmes for the Academic Year 2026–2027. The large number of applications received bear testament to the recognition of IMLI as the centre of excellence in training in the full spectrum of international maritime law.

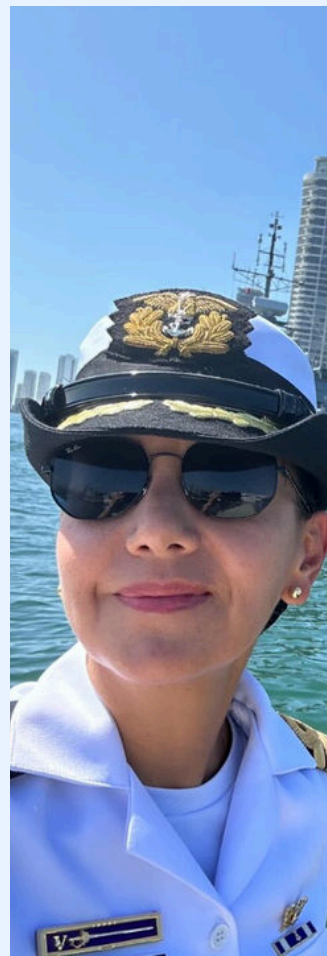

The continued support of donors for fellowships funding for government officers hailing from developing countries, especially Small Island Developing States and Least Developed Countries, will enable deserving professionals in the maritime and related sector to embark on a journey of knowledge which will empower national administration to uphold the rule of international maritime law.

Our oceans and the ships that traverse them are in a constant state of development and the sustainability of the maritime sector requires experts who will lead the industry to new heights.

Join us in October 2026 and together let us make the difference we want to see. Send us your best and most talented applicants and we will train and provide them with the requisite capacity-building which will transform them into the maritime professionals they aspire to become. In support of gender equality, 50% of places in the programmes are reserved for female candidates.

The extended closing date for submission of applications is 10 April 2026. For more details about IMLI and its programmes, kindly visit <https://imli.org> or contact admissions@imli.org.
